

Aboriginal, Rural, and Remote Health Group (ARRHG)

Proudly presents:

'UNPACKING the BACKPACK'

Charlene Hellson is of Blackfoot and Celtic ancestry. She leads a double life as a Manager with the Alberta Health Services and an Artist. She truly believes in the potency of the Arts to heal. "Unpacking the Backpack" was written for non-Aboriginal health care providers attending a conference on mental health and diversity. This monologue is designed to convey, through experiential and experimental means, the impact of colonization upon the Aboriginal people and to educate others about how historical events impact them in contemporary society.

Refreshments to follow

ARRHG is a new group looking for students interested in Aboriginal, rural or remote health. All students are welcome, including U of S, SIAST, First Nations University of Canada and U of R Saskatoon Campus. Students are encouraged to join in any capacity they are able, whether that includes participating in events, organizing events or joining the executive. Our executive typically meets on twice a month.
