This event takes an interactive approach to engage young Aboriginal professionals and post-secondary students!

- ★ Mining will add an average of 32,000 new jobs/year to the Saskatchewan economy over the next two decades.
- ★ Saskatchewan's mining industry pays double what other industries pay, and it currently provides direct and indirect employment for 25,000 workers
- ★ Most Canadian mining development is taking place in traditional territories, creating a unique opportunity for young Aboriginal professionals to contribute to an industry that is strongly impacting their communities

Join 50 young Aboriginal professionals from across Saskatchewan and the rest of Canada in Learning about the Canadian Mining Industry and its value for Aboriginal Communities

Symposium Features:

- ★ Employment Speakers Panel – Panelists from a variety of backgrounds answer questions about employment in the Canadian mining industry. Participants will leave with a better understanding of what it's like to work in the mining industry, what it takes to get and keep those jobs, and what types of jobs are available.
- ★ Constitutional Reform – Former National Chief Del Riley will discuss his role in the drafting of section 35 and its importance for Aboriginal communities.
- ★ Leadership and Team Building – A series of fun, interactive exercises designed to engage participants and build important leadership qualities.
- ★ Our Vision is simple: Engage Aboriginal communities and advocate on behalf of Aboriginal Peoples respecting values, building trust and educating as an independent Aboriginal organization.
